Religion and language are among the most complex, defining, and intensely felt symbolic expressions of humankind. Can the study of language provide us with insights into religion? Conversely, can the study of religion reveal the shared nature of linguistic experience? This course explores how the study of language and religion can mutually inform one another. We will investigate first how both emerged – separately - as objects of systematic study in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century, informed by similar evolutionary, structural and functional approaches. Religion and language come together most prominently, however, in self consciously “marked” forms of discourse, such as religious speech registers, including magical chants, mythical narratives, blasphemy, sacred texts, verbal attributions of agency, and expressions of pious subjectivity. Students will explore these topics theoretically and ethnographically with original research projects.

Learning Goals
- Learn to identify, produce and evaluate narratives of the history of the anthropological study of religion.
- Learn to identify, produce and evaluate the history of the anthropological study of language.

- Learn how religious discourse is “marked” poetically, and how this marking functions in the organization of society.
- Learn to identify and evaluate competing interpretations of these structures and functions in discourse.
- Learn to develop an original ethnographic research question.
- Learn how to evaluate secondary literature that supports, refutes, or otherwise contributes to your central claim.
- Learn to gather original ethnographic data, prepare and analyze it for use in a research paper.
- Learn to use cultural comparison as a tool for understanding how cultural, social, or economic contexts shape understandings and behaviors.
- Learn to work collegially as thinkers and cultural critics.
- Learn to apply critical, analytical, and evaluative thinking to one’s own writing, through drafting, revising, and/or editing processes appropriate to the discipline in which they are working.
- Understand and learn to use these key terms in linguistic anthropology:
  - Religion
  - Indexicality/performance
  - Reflexivity
  - Media
  - Identity
  - Code
  - Register

General expectations:
Students must attend all classes. If you must be absent for a medical reason or family emergency, you must provide written documentation.
Rules of academic integrity must be followed.

Papers will be evaluated for strength and originality of your claim, the way in which your data supports the claim, the way in which your claim relates to (e.g. supporting or refuting) other claims in the literature, the coherence of the paper as a whole, and the validity of the findings.

Papers should use the APA style. I strongly recommend that you use citation software such as Refworks (supported by GW) or Endnote.

In your final papers, you must have an argument. Please consult the Turabian chapters on formulating a research problem when writing a research paper.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY
I personally support the GW Code of Academic Integrity. It states: “Academic dishonesty is defined as cheating of any kind, including misrepresenting one's own work, taking credit for the work of others without crediting them and without appropriate authorization, and the fabrication of information.” For the remainder of the code, see: http://www.gwu.edu/~ntegrity/code.html

SUPPORT FOR STUDENTS OUTSIDE THE CLASSROOM
DISABILITY SUPPORT SERVICES (DSS)
Any student who may need an accommodation based on the potential impact of a disability should contact the Disability Support Services office at 202-994-8250 in the Marvin Center, Suite 242, to establish eligibility and to coordinate reasonable accommodations. For additional information please refer to: http://gwired.gwu.edu/dss/

UNIVERSITY COUNSELING CENTER (UCC)  202-994-5300
The University Counseling Center (UCC) offers 24/7 assistance and referral to address students' personal, social, career, and study skills problems. Services for students include:
- crisis and emergency mental health consultations
- confidential assessment, counseling services (individual and small group), and referrals
