

Anthropology Fireside Chat with Edward C. Green, Medical Anthropologist
January 26, 2012, 7 p.m.

The second fireside chat for M.A. students in anthropology will be held on Jan. 26 at 7 p.m. in the Anthropology seminar room, 2110 G St. Edward C. Green, Ph.D., will be our guest. As with all our fireside chats, the discussion will focus on career choices and trajectories for anthropologists.

Dr. Green is an applied, medical anthropologist with over 35 years of experience in developing countries. Until recently he was the Director of the AIDS Prevention Research. His experience includes AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases, family planning, substance abuse, primary health care, maternal and child health, children affected by war, water and sanitation, environmental health, U.S. minority health, biodiversity and conservation. He is a specialist in integrating indigenous and biomedical health systems. He has had a wide range of jobs outside of academia, including USAID project design and evaluation. He is the author of 8 books and many articles, chapters, and technical reports.

He is currently director of the New Paradigm Research Fund. For information, visit:
