

GW Roots & Shoots and The Anthropology Society present

Friendships, Stress and Motherhood Among Wild Chimpanzees

A talk by

Dr. Carson Murray

Wednesday, March 7th, 6 p.m.

Bell Hall 106

Carson Murray is a primate behavioral ecologist who studies social relationships among chimpanzees. She is researching the mother-infant relationship and friendships between wild female chimpanzees.

Dr. Murray is a member of the GW Anthropology Department and the Center for the Advanced Study of Hominid Paleobiology.

Come hear about her exciting new research and meet some fellow anthropology students!