

The George Washington University Department of Anthropology Presents
as part of our Spring Colloquium Series

Dr. Fida Adely

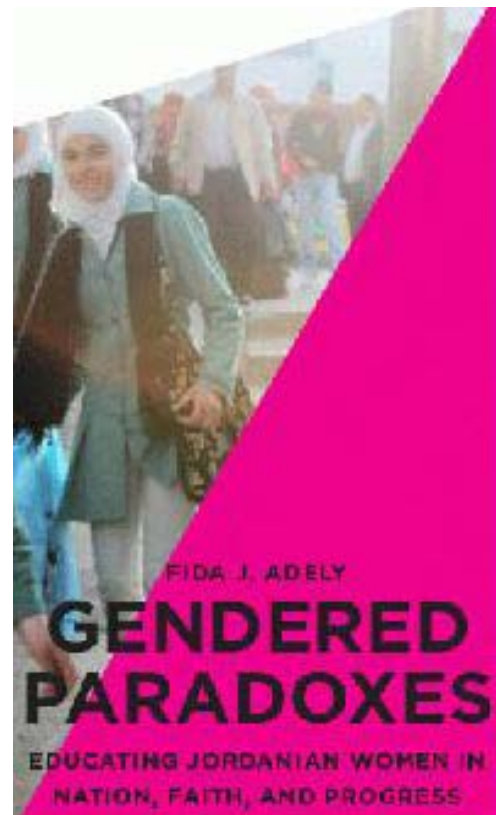

Georgetown University, Clovis and Hala Maksoud Chair in Arab Studies

Gendered Paradoxes: Educating Jordanian Women in Nation, Faith, and Progress

Please bring a brown-bag lunch and join us for an informal talk on Dr. Adely's book.

Dr. Fida Adely is sociocultural anthropologist whose research interests include education in the Arab world, gender and development, gender and labor, and development in the Arab world more broadly. Her contribution to GWU's Spring Colloquium Series will be a talk on her book, Gendered Paradoxes, which explores the education of women and girls in contemporary Jordan.

Dr. Adely is currently working on a project related to the "marriage crisis" in Jordan, and is working on a manuscript related to this project. She has also recently published an article entitled "The Emergence of a New Labor Movement in Jordan" in the Middle East Report, and is interested in Jordanian citizens' participation in such movements and the effects of such participation on forms of identification.

Monday, March 18, 2013 from 11:00 am – 12:30 pm

Hortense Amsterdam House, Room 202
2110 G. St., NW, Washington, DC 20052

Email anth@email.gwu.edu or call 202-994-6075 with questions.