The George Washington University and the Columbian College of Arts of Sciences are pleased to announce the 2015 competition for Summer Fellowships to be awarded from the William Warren Endowment Fund. This fund was established to support scholarly work and research of current undergraduate and graduate students. Eligible students should be majoring or pursuing a degree in one or more of the following fields of study: Archaeology, biological anthropology, Classical languages and literature, hominid paleobiology, and paleontology. Applicants must be students of the George Washington University applying to participate in a GW project for the upcoming summer and should have a 3.0 GPA or higher to be considered for the scholarship. Awardees will be selected from within the eligible pool of undergraduate and graduate student applications proposing advanced scholarship and/or research in the above-mentioned fields of study. For 2015, awards will be made up to, but not in excess of, a maximum of $2,000.

Those interested in applying should submit the following:
1) Cover letter, which mentions the GW project in which the student will be participating and the professor with whom s/he will be working;
2) CV/resume (1-2 pages only);
3) Personal statement of not more than two pages, outlining interests, previous experience, and reason for applying;
4) Preliminary budget, with the total amount requested clearly marked.

Applicants must be willing, if successful, to write a brief review of their experiences afterward, which may be posted on the CCAS website, and to attend a luncheon in Fall 2015 at which they will give a brief presentation on their summer activities.

The deadline for receipt of applications is Friday, April 17, 2015. Please send application materials as e-mail attachments to Jonathan Higman in the Anthropology Department, at anth@gwu.edu.

Notification of awards will be made by May 1, 2015.
