

Anthropology of Gender Colloquium Series 2012

Cortney Hughes

Department of Sociology and Anthropology George Mason University

speaks on

Unintended Modern Citizenship:

The Workings of Gender, Development Policies, and Islamic Beliefs
in Urban Reproductive Health Clinics in Morocco

January 20, 2012

11 a.m. to noon

HAH 202 (Anthropology seminar room)

Cortney Hughes (Ph.D. UC-Irvine 2010) is a medical anthropologist specializing in the Middle East and North Africa. Her most recent publication, on the “amazing” fertility decline among Moroccan women, examines reproductive decision-making in the context of Islamic tradition and economic change.