

The GW Department of Anthropology
presents the 2012 Carroll Lecture in Archaeology

Mound Builders and Monument Makers of the Northern Great Lakes, AD 1200-1600

by Meghan C. L. Howey

Assistant Professor, Anthropology/Archaeology
University of New Hampshire

Friday, March 30

11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

HAH 202 (Anthropology seminar room)

Dr. Howey studies how “small-scale” societies maintain egalitarian social organization in the face of emergent social complexity, with a focus on the role of ritual practice and ceremonial monuments in this process. She has explored these issues through years of work on Native American occupation of the Northern Great Lakes in the centuries before European contact.
